Who Loves a Parade?

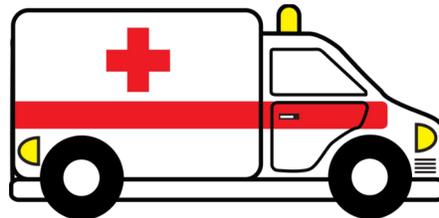

Traveling in a procession of emergency vehicles requires extra self-control

Maintain 300 to 500 feet following distance to the unit ahead.

Expect traffic to stop yielding after the first unit passes.

Never assume the path another unit has already made will remain open.

Other traffic focuses on the emergency vehicle they can see. They don't expect multiple units.

Search, identify, and manage potential hazards independent of the other units. Hazards include other units.

A procession of units makes things more complicated and not less.

Drive within YOUR vehicle's limits.

Do not try to match the speed and agility of other units.
